ELECTION 2018

New Jersey congressional district that voted for Trump likely to go Democratic

By Bill Bralrow · November 2, 2018

New Jersey's 11th Congressional District voters will elect their representatives on Tuesday. Incumbent Republican in Congressmen Frank Lofredo is not seeking reelection.

The district is a mix of urban and suburban areas. It includes parts of Newark, Jersey City, and Elizabeth. The district has a diverse population and a history of electing Democratic representatives.

The district is currently represented by Frank Lofredo, a Republican who has served in Congress since 2013. He is not seeking reelection in 2018.

The district is expected to go Democratic in 2018. This is based on recent polling and the district's history of electing Democratic representatives.
