Galloway, NJ - Stockton student Courtney Clemens will give a free public presentation, "Upstanders Throughout History," on Friday, Dec. 4 beginning at noon at the university's Manahawkin Instructional Site.

This program will offer a look at the many examples of ordinary people going above and beyond to help others. While offering an insight into many different people who helped save the lives of others, this program will also give those in attendance the chance to see how they can make a difference in their communities.

Clemens is currently an undergraduate student majoring in Liberal Arts Major and minoring in Holocaust and Genocide Studies.

The presentation is part of a lecture series on the Holocaust and genocide presented by Stockton students and alumni at the Manahawkin Instructional Site, 712 E. Bay Ave., Manahawkin. Lunch will be provided. Attendees are asked to RSVP to 609-626-3883.
