The Richard Stockton College of NJ

The guide praised Stockton's campus, stating "...it is, by all accounts a beautiful campus and the school (does well) at keeping it that way."

In the synopsis of the student survey, Stockton was described as "friendly"...with many atypical students who feel comfortable, because there are so many student organizations on campus. "There are a lot of diverse people here from many religions, regions, cultures and the like. (These diverse students) seem to fit in all right," the publication quoted a student as responding. Stockton's Office of Institutional Research reports that Stockton's undergraduate student retention rate and its graduate rate (when compared with others of its size) are higher than average, which further demonstrates the College's appeal to its diverse student body.
